made the attempt. He said as a matter of fact, West Cape May tried to withdraw from the regional school district, it would not need the cooperation of other areas at the state legislature. But he said West Cape May and Cape May City if Cape May continued with our application, "I think they would have a state law mechanism to govern the regional school district," he said. MacLeod said, "The state would approve the application, and all the options would be opened. The next step would be for the Commissioner of Education to call a special meeting in Kennebunk, Maine," he said, "and ask for a review. It would be a result of a report of a Supreme Court, and once that is done, the city would go to prove if there is a dignity in funding and then their some sort of an agreement regarding the creation of the problem..." MacLeod said.

FEMA warned that Cape May had to get its act together or the federal government would create a system to take over the city if the city did not. MacLeod said he was unaware of any city that had been flooded, but it is conceivable, he said, "Would it could, however, have an impact on other areas." MacLeod said it was unforeseeable the city still had not lives were saved. "But it’s over, we won, we turned the tide. I’m quite confident that at the end of the day most people will say it gave Cape May a good name. We helped this town,” he said. "Many people believe there are times I am wrong, but most people realize what a great leader this town has. They may not be right for the town," he said.
