CAPE MAY COUNTY – With the exception of a boost in the number of candidates running for local offices, little changed in the county on Nov. 5 with a large number of incumbents reclaiming their seats following the day.

The town hall was open for the local candidates who were there to get hands on experience and learning skills in preparation for future elections.

LOWER TOWNSHIP — A number of residents of Lower Township have warned the township about the possibility of a multi-headed monster.

It is reported that the monster, known as the "Lopatcong Monster," was last seen in the township in the early 1970s.

The residents are warning the town to be on the lookout for the creature and to take necessary precautions to avoid its attack.

Veterans remembered

Above, right fistful of a story goes as his Utah Academy School in Lower Township, holds a photograph of his grandfather, who served in the U.S. Army during the Vietnam War. His team was present in the local area to remember those who served in America’s armed forces. See more photos on page A12.
