Continued from page A1

Lowe: Megonigal the fire scene commander said there were no signs of explosive materials inside the garage.

"There were dozens of greenhouse pots, some with flammable materials inside," Megonigal said.

"Shunpike Road residents were able to control the fire to the building so it didn’t spread to neighboring houses or care Facilities," Megonigal said.

"Our neighbor Mary Bowen said she never heard the upstairs from inside her home, which is about five houses away from the junkyard, but could hear popping from her lawn. "I was in the kitchen cooking and heard a lot of popping," she said while outside and look," she said.

Moore said the smoke was readily apparent. "I was in the driveway and I couldn’t do anything about it," Moore said.

"I just shut down the street and called the fire department," she said.

Moore said the smoke was rapidly increasing. "I called the police and they just rode around," Moore said. "I called the fire department, and they just rode around." She said she was lucky there were no neighbors falling in there and then the fire department.

Moore said there were no fire hydrates in the vicinity. "They were not in the neighborhood," Moore said.

"At one point the fire fighters on a ladder truck had to deal with a loss of pressure. One way they handled it to follow firefighters in the truck. At one point the fire fighters on a ladder truck had to deal with a loss of pressure. One way they handled it to follow firefighters in the truck."

Continued from page A1

Richardson said allegations be the enforcing agency.

Continued from page A1

Richardson said the state’s contract is with Cape May Development Board refers to the lawsuit.

Continued from page A1

Richardson said the state’s contract is with Cape May Development Board refers to the lawsuit. The state has taken no steps to enforce the agreement. Richardson said allegations be the enforcing agency.

Moore said she never heard the upstairs from inside her home, which is about five houses away from the junkyard, but could hear popping from her lawn. "I was in the kitchen cooking and heard a lot of popping," she said while outside and look," she said. "It’s hard to believe that something that happened in the house could have caused the fire," Moore said.

Moore said she never heard the upstairs from inside her home, which is about five houses away from the junkyard, but could hear popping from her lawn. "I was in the kitchen cooking and heard a lot of popping," she said while outside and look," she said. "It’s hard to believe that something that happened in the house could have caused the fire," Moore said.

Moore said she never heard the upstairs from inside her home, which is about five houses away from the junkyard, but could hear popping from her lawn. "I was in the kitchen cooking and heard a lot of popping," she said while outside and look," she said. "It’s hard to believe that something that happened in the house could have caused the fire," Moore said.