During his 20 years as a professional musician, Simonsen has been the music director of the Preparatory High School in Wildwood, New Jersey, teaching music, specializing in composition and theory. He is a master at the piano, and he has composed over 120 original songs. He is the creator of the album "E is for Erik," which was released in 2013. The album features songs with prop pictures, and it was a hit in Europe and the US. Simonsen and Caterini, who also help record the album, were able to use a variety of musical instruments and sounds and effects to create a unique experience for listeners. Simonsen said that he was surprised with some of the responses to the album. He believes that the album has evolved into something that is not just a children's album but also a piece of art. He hopes that people will enjoy the album and be inspired by its music and messages.

Caterini was inspired to create the album by the songs that Simonsen played. He appreciated Simonsen's ability to create music that was both suitable for children and enjoyable for adults. Caterini said that he was glad to be a part of the project and that he hoped the album would be as successful as the other albums he has produced.

Simonsen and Caterini are also working on a new project, which is a coloring book called "E is for Erik." The book is based on the songs from the album and is aimed at children. Simonsen and Caterini are working to produce the coloring book and to distribute it to music retailers.

E is for Erik

Simonsen played the songs together at school and he really wanted to get the ball rolling. He told him about it, Simonsen said. “We really just took it as a brainstorm. We downloaded the album and certain tracks. Caterini was associated with some of the things that were right now in Europe and right now in the United States. He was happy about all the tracks. There are more tracks streaming online and there is a lot more music being done with new technology. The compositions of the album are also available online, along with the album. ‘E is for Erik’ coloring book has been released by CAT House Sound LLC, in Wildwood. Caterini produced the album at his studio, Cat. House Sound, and the album is distributed in the US and Canada by Atlantic, issuer of his first album. He is currently working on the coloring book, which will be released in the spring. He is also working on a new music project, which he hopes will be as successful as the album. He said that he is excited about the project and is looking forward to sharing it with others. He hopes that people will enjoy the album and the coloring book, and that they will be inspired by the music and the message.
