'Four-square' house in CM a great offering

CAPE MAY - If you travel down Cape May's New York Avenue, you are sure to come across a number of what Tricia Hendricks of Wilsey Realty calls a "four-square" house.

One of the craft-style houses seen in this end of town, the typical floor plan has a center door, with two living areas - one to left and one to the right of the entrance - and the other fourths of the house containing dining room and kitchen area, perhaps with a bath.

Built in 1912, Hendricks said this home was handed down to the current owner from parents the family coming from the Baltimore area.

"We are seeing more and more buyers who come from D.C. and Baltimore who are looking at Cape May," she said.

Hendricks said 1045 New York has been renovated to include a lot of the modern amenities people are looking for in a beach house, while maintaining the architectural integrity.

"The last thing people want is a house with no charm," Hendricks said. "But people also want the amenities they are accustomed to at home."

Hendricks said 1045 New York has a successful history as a rental over the last few years. She said it has been offered as a complete package; with bikes, chairs and a beach box provided to the renter. She said a number of the renters have been return visitors.

The home is being sold furnished minus personal items - mainly artwork - so the house is a turnkey property for living or renting.

As you enter through the front door, there is a common area to the left and right. Off the right sitting area is a half bath.

To the left, you walk back to a large
