Corrado said he didn’t believe adding the section would be disuaded many from approving the site based on the current noise ordinances. "But it was a request made by residents and I want to continue to look at it."

"I understand the residents’ concerns," Wilde said. "And we did provide comments. We just want to make sure that if there is a noise problem, it is addressed in a way that will be fair to the neighbors and the winery.

"They came back with the same kind of comment and I have called the police and several ticket have been written because of my calls," he said.

"Just do it, I don’t care what we can do?" Combs said.

"We had your noise complaint a day ago. That you saw something. Once we start writing tickets the word will be out there."

"I pick up after them, and I guarantee you he’s the only one I take that from," Sheftz said.

"I have called the police and several tickets have been written because of my calls," he said.

"Like picking up dog poop," Sheftz said.

Advisory Board was dissolved and she said the township should appoint an enforcement community service of those who don’t clean up after their dogs.

"That’s how to win the battle."

"I would like to see them write tickets. No tickets, no warnings, then publish the information," he said

"I have written to the SADC, the CADB and the county department of the county file doesn’t contain a NJPDES permit," Corrado said.

"I have called the police, and several tickets have been written because of my calls," he said.

"What will happen with the NJPDES permit, or the approval," Combs said."

"I think the borough should appoint someone to enforce the law."

Correction: The name of the township police was incorrect in a previous version of this story. It was incorrectly listed as the Lower Township Police Department. The correct name is the Lower Township Police Department - enforcement."
