CAPE MAY — One of the expected signs of fall in Cape May is the end of parking meter fees. This year, however, in the middle of a megadollar-plus project to develop the city’s downtown, meter fees were extended through the end of the year.

At the request of merchants on the mall, the City Council finally put into a letter. They over the years, discussed it and finally they put it into a letter. They would like to extend parking meters just in the immediate mall area through November and December and start in April,” Councilman Be Pasquesi said during the council meeting.

City Council approved the ordinance to keep parking meters operating around the Washington Street Mall through the Christmas shopping season and begin to prevent mall employees from taking up all the parking spaces.

CAPE MAY — The 8th annual Memorial Paddle Out and Pasta Fundraiser, held Oct. 8 in honor of late Cape May firefighter Lt. Andy Boyt, raised $21,000 for local charities and the National Fallen Firefighters Foundation.

The Paddle Out is a memorial event held each year to remember the passing of Boyt, known as an avid surfer as well as a firefighter. Boyt passed away at the age of 45 in 2011. He joined the city’s fire department in 1997, advancing through the ranks to lieutenant.
