Murphy heralds vaccine’s arrival

By DAVID NAHAN

CAPE MAY Star and Wave

MAYS LANDING — New Jersey health care workers began receiving the Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine Wednesday morning at the new Cape May MAC (Music+Arts+Culture) as part of the state’s first wave of vaccinations.

The first to get vacci- nated were health care workers who are dealing with the pandemic on the front lines.

Murphy called a “momentous day,” saying the state was making “history with this vaccine.”

The tours have been a beloved annual tradition for nearly a half-century. The event was canceled in 2020.

Due to COVID-19 restric- tions and protocols, the event in December must be canceled.

According to Felger, TRACEN continuously monitors all recruits enlisting training, specifically using a restriction of movement (ROM) plan to identify, isolate and contain any potential spread of COVID or are showing signs of illness to limit the spread of disease. Through these measures, no one has required advanced medical care.

Murphy said Monday during his COVID-19 press conference "It is a day we have been all waiting for. It is a day of hope and optimism.”

"We are in the early stages of recovery, but the light at the end of the tunnel is getting closer.”

TRACEN sees hike in COVID-19 cases

TRENTON — New Jer- sey health care workers began receiving the Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine Wednesday morning at the new Cape May MAC (Music+Arts+Culture) as part of the state’s first wave of vaccinations.

The first to get vacci- nated were health care workers who are dealing with the pandemic on the front lines.

Murphy called a “momentous day,” saying the state was making “history with this vaccine.”

The tours have been a beloved annual tradition for nearly a half-century. The event was canceled in 2020.

Due to COVID-19 restric- tions and protocols, the event in December must be canceled.

According to Felger, TRACEN continuously monitors all recruits enlisting training, specifically using a restriction of movement (ROM) plan to identify, isolate and contain any potential spread of COVID or are showing signs of illness to limit the spread of disease. Through these measures, no one has required advanced medical care.

Murphy said Monday during his COVID-19 press conference "It is a day we have been all waiting for. It is a day of hope and optimism.”

"We are in the early stages of recovery, but the light at the end of the tunnel is getting closer.”

TRACEN sees hike in COVID-19 cases

TRENTON — New Jer- sey health care workers began receiving the Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine Wednesday morning at the new Cape May MAC (Music+Arts+Culture) as part of the state’s first wave of vaccinations.

The first to get vacci- nated were health care workers who are dealing with the pandemic on the front lines.

Murphy called a “momentous day,” saying the state was making “history with this vaccine.”

The tours have been a beloved annual tradition for nearly a half-century. The event was canceled in 2020.

Due to COVID-19 restric- tions and protocols, the event in December must be canceled.

According to Felger, TRACEN continuously monitors all recruits enlisting training, specifically using a restriction of movement (ROM) plan to identify, isolate and contain any potential spread of COVID or are showing signs of illness to limit the spread of disease. Through these measures, no one has required advanced medical care.

Murphy said Monday during his COVID-19 press conference "It is a day we have been all waiting for. It is a day of hope and optimism.”

"We are in the early stages of recovery, but the light at the end of the tunnel is getting closer.”

TRACEN sees hike in COVID-19 cases

TRENTON — New Jer- sey health care workers began receiving the Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine Wednesday morning at the new Cape May MAC (Music+Arts+Culture) as part of the state’s first wave of vaccinations.

The first to get vacci- nated were health care workers who are dealing with the pandemic on the front lines.

Murphy called a “momentous day,” saying the state was making “history with this vaccine.”

The tours have been a beloved annual tradition for nearly a half-century. The event was canceled in 2020.

Due to COVID-19 restric- tions and protocols, the event in December must be canceled.

According to Felger, TRACEN continuously monitors all recruits enlisting training, specifically using a restriction of movement (ROM) plan to identify, isolate and contain any potential spread of COVID or are showing signs of illness to limit the spread of disease. Through these measures, no one has required advanced medical care.

Murphy said Monday during his COVID-19 press conference "It is a day we have been all waiting for. It is a day of hope and optimism.”

"We are in the early stages of recovery, but the light at the end of the tunnel is getting closer.”

TRACEN sees hike in COVID-19 cases

TRENTON — New Jer- sey health care workers began receiving the Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine Wednesday morning at the new Cape May MAC (Music+Arts+Culture) as part of the state’s first wave of vaccinations.

The first to get vacci- nated were health care workers who are dealing with the pandemic on the front lines.

Murphy called a “momentous day,” saying the state was making “history with this vaccine.”

The tours have been a beloved annual tradition for nearly a half-century. The event was canceled in 2020.

Due to COVID-19 restric- tions and protocols, the event in December must be canceled.

According to Felger, TRACEN continuously monitors all recruits enlisting training, specifically using a restriction of movement (ROM) plan to identify, isolate and contain any potential spread of COVID or are showing signs of illness to limit the spread of disease. Through these measures, no one has required advanced medical care.

Murphy said Monday during his COVID-19 press conference "It is a day we have been all waiting for. It is a day of hope and optimism.”

"We are in the early stages of recovery, but the light at the end of the tunnel is getting closer.”

TRACEN sees hike in COVID-19 cases

TRENTON — New Jer- sey health care workers began receiving the Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine Wednesday morning at the new Cape May MAC (Music+Arts+Culture) as part of the state’s first wave of vaccinations.

The first to get vacci- nated were health care workers who are dealing with the pandemic on the front lines.

Murphy called a “momentous day,” saying the state was making “history with this vaccine.”

The tours have been a beloved annual tradition for nearly a half-century. The event was canceled in 2020.

Due to COVID-19 restric- tions and protocols, the event in December must be canceled.

According to Felger, TRACEN continuously monitors all recruits enlisting training, specifically using a restriction of movement (ROM) plan to identify, isolate and contain any potential spread of COVID or are showing signs of illness to limit the spread of disease. Through these measures, no one has required advanced medical care.