By DAVID NAHAN
CAPE May Star and Wave

Murphy: No intention for state shutdown

Governor suspends indoor youth, adult sports, lowers limits on inside gatherings

By DAVID NAHAN
CAPE May Star and Wave

Late-arriving monarchs a mystery to naturalists

By JACK FICHTER
CAPE May Star and Wave

Late-arriving monarchs mystery to naturalists

By DAVID NAHAN
CAPE May Star and Wave

Lower Cape May goes to all-virtual learning schedule

By JACK FICHTER
CAPE May Star and Wave

Lower Cape May goes to all-virtual learning schedule

Cape May Star and Wave

COVID cases rise nine-fold since August

House of the week

SHORE MEDICAL CENTER a proud member of the PENN CANCER NETWORK

Cape May Star and Wave

1668 YEAR NO. 48 WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 2020CAPE MAY, N.J.

Serving America's National Historic Landmark City

“our community and provide
We will monitor the impact spread of illness.”
we are taking the necessary
munity and “our schools,
increases of COVID-19 cases
tellucci stated due to recent Superintendent Joseph Cas-
Dec. 1.
moved to all-virtual learning
Regional School District
Lower Cape May Regional goes
to all-virtual learning schedule

By JACk FICHTER
CAPE May Star and Wave

CAPE MAY POINT — Monarch butterflies were not ough in late November, meaning that could their lives due to a shortage of blooming flowers to fuel their flight across Delaware Bay and on their wintering sites 2,000 miles away in Mex-Monarch butterflies confluence for the most part in late Oct-ber before they began to continue to arrive after a hard
winter for area habitat
, director of New Jersey Audubon’s Monarch Monitoring Project, said in the
the project has the

Louise Zemaitis, associates with the New Jersey Bird Observatory, saw one or two monarchs flying near a same spot Oct. 28, the first
she said.
“Just because we say that all
limit the spread of COVID-19.
are taking the necessary
munity and “our schools,
increases of COVID-19 cases
tellucci stated due to recent
Superintendent Joseph Cas-
Dec. 1.
moved to all-virtual learning
Regional School District
Lower Cape May Regional goes
to all-virtual learning schedule

By JACk FICHTER
CAPE May Star and Wave

CAPE MAY POINT — Monarch butterflies were not
ough in late November, meaning that could
their lives due to a shortage of blooming
flowers to fuel their flight across Delaware Bay and
on their wintering sites 2,000 miles away in Mex-
Monarch butterflies con-
fluence for the most part in late Oct-
ber before they began to continue to arrive after a hard
winter for area habitat
, director of New Jersey Audubon’s Monarch Monitoring Project, said in the
the project has the

Louise Zemaitis, associ-
ates with the New Jersey
Bird Observatory, saw one
or two monarchs flying near a
same spot Oct. 28, the first
she said.
“Just because we say that all
limit the spread of COVID-19.
are taking the necessary