Fishers say wind-energy company’s reimbursement process too difficult to navigate
Ørsted survey boats damaging fishing gear

By JEFF FICHETTE

CAPE MAY — Several commercial fishermen claim survey boats hired by wind turbine developer Ørsted are damaging their equipment and causing financial losses.

Wagner said Ørsted made that claim based on tracking data on the Fisherman’s Memorial statue April 2 during the Blessing of the Waters ceremony. Betty Shelton, who lost her husband to the sea in 1957, and her son, who was born a month after the loss, place a wreath offers prayers for safety on the sea in the Memorial, was attended by a crowd of Pharmacy at Rutgers

By JOHN ALVAREZ

CAPE MAY — Several commercial fishermen claim survey boats hired by wind turbine developer Ørsted are damaging their equipment and causing financial losses.

Wagner said Ørsted made that claim based on tracking data on the Fisherman’s Memorial statue April 2 during the Blessing of the Waters ceremony. Betty Shelton, who lost her husband to the sea in 1957, and her son, who was born a month after the loss, place a wreath offers prayers for safety on the sea in the Memorial, was attended by a crowd of Pharmacy at Rutgers

By JOHN ALVAREZ

CAPE MAY — Several commercial fishermen claim survey boats hired by wind turbine developer Ørsted are damaging their equipment and causing financial losses.

Wagner said Ørsted made that claim based on tracking data on the Fisherman’s Memorial statue April 2 during the Blessing of the Waters ceremony. Betty Shelton, who lost her husband to the sea in 1957, and her son, who was born a month after the loss, place a wreath offers prayers for safety on the sea in the Memorial, was attended by a crowd of Pharmacy at Rutgers