Cape May Cares began in 2018 and currently focuses on opportunities for children, families and disabled persons, but plans to branch out to more of the community. “Most people do not know there are 33 children in this housing authority,” said Keith Lafferty, president of Cape May Cares, who is co-director of Emergency Medicine at Gulf Coast Medical Center and an assistant professor of emergency medicine at Tulane University. He also serves as chairman of the Board of Directors of the Cape May Housing Authority.

Last week, Lafferty and his wife, Cathy, were visiting a room at the housing authority office to be used for after-school tutoring by retired teachers. The room has been suitable for some children, two computer with Wi-Fi and a closet for teacher’s items. “We have three boys now, and they still have connections with the schools in the area,” Lafferty said. “We have children who have signed up for Big Brothers and Big Sisters to children in the housing authority.”

“We were extremely fortunate to be able to move temporary on the island and some vacant units and have some children who have one of the children, he said.”

The Island Housing Foundation sponsored 11 children for winter holidays. Three of the children, during the winter, Lafferty said. Cape May Cares held an end-of-year barbecue, a back-to-school barbeque for all housing authority residents.

Lafferty said Congress Hall offered Breakfast with Santa at no cost to the housing authority children, including a train ride around the property and a visit to Santa at no cost to the housing authority children. Lafferty and Cathy, both offer their gift to the housing authority children.

“We were extremely for senior citizens, said Lafferty.”
