Continued from Page A1

Cape May may... could be an opportunity for a local family and could be an opportunity for a local family... and retail sales are very good ideas.

Resident Lee Patton of West Cape May said the city would receive revenue from cannabis businesses.

Resident Jack Killeen of West Cape May would receive a 2 percent tax on cultivation and manufacturing and a 1 percent tax on retail sales.

Mayor Carol Sabo said West Cape May would receive a 2 percent tax on cultivation and manufacturing and a 1 percent tax on retail sales.

Karen Kass said she did not want to see the borough have a huge 100,000- to 200,000-square-foot "tin building."

Resident Lee Patton offered her support for the cannabis ordinance.

Resident Jack Killeen, who sits on the West Cape May Borough Government Ethics Committee, said it was impossible at this time to project how much revenue the borough would receive.

Resident Jack Killeen believes the borough will spend more money than it makes from cannabis businesses. He also said that a city with problems that may be precipitated.

I want you to know that I am quite a few other neighbors, when this is going to happen as a result and be inserted in the borough's financial plan, said Sabo.

"You're expecting a great deal of revenue from this, right?" Smith asked.

"Yes," replied the mayor.

Resident Janet Dwyer complimented the commission for their recent commission meeting.

Resident Bill Ottenger said he is generally in favor of cannabis businesses.

Commissioner John Francis II said he spoke with the sheriff in Gunnison, Col., on where cannabis retail outlets opened after legalization. He said that cannabis retail stores were few and far between.

West Cape May would receive revenue from cannabis businesses. The city would receive a 2 percent tax on cultivation and manufacturing and a 1 percent tax on retail sales.

Resident Richard Kauffeld said he did not want to see the borough have a huge 100,000- to 200,000-square-foot "tin building."

Resident Lee Patton of West Cape May would receive a 2 percent tax on cultivation and manufacturing and a 1 percent tax on retail sales.

Mayor Carol Sabo said West Cape May would receive a 2 percent tax on cultivation and manufacturing and a 1 percent tax on retail sales.

"I want you to know that I am quite a few other neighbors, when this is going to happen as a result and be inserted in the borough's financial plan, said Sabo.

"You're expecting a great deal of revenue from this, right?" Smith asked.

"Yes," replied the mayor.

Resident Jack Killeen, who sits on the West Cape May Borough Government Ethics Committee, said it was impossible at this time to project how much revenue the borough would receive.

Resident Jack Killeen believes the borough will spend more money than it makes from cannabis businesses. He also said that a city with problems that may be precipitated.

I want you to know that I am quite a few other neighbors, when this is going to happen as a result and be inserted in the borough's financial plan, said Sabo.

"You're expecting a great deal of revenue from this, right?" Smith asked.

"Yes," replied the mayor.

Resident Janet Dwyer complimented the commission for their recent commission meeting.

Resident Bill Ottenger said he is generally in favor of cannabis businesses.

Commissioner John Francis II said he spoke with the sheriff in Gunnison, Col., on where cannabis retail outlets opened after legalization. He said that cannabis retail stores were few and far between.

West Cape May would receive revenue from cannabis businesses. The city would receive a 2 percent tax on cultivation and manufacturing and a 1 percent tax on retail sales.

Resident Richard Kauffeld said he did not want to see the borough have a huge 100,000- to 200,000-square-foot "tin building."

Resident Lee Patton of West Cape May would receive a 2 percent tax on cultivation and manufacturing and a 1 percent tax on retail sales.

Mayor Carol Sabo said West Cape May would receive a 2 percent tax on cultivation and manufacturing and a 1 percent tax on retail sales.

"I want you to know that I am quite a few other neighbors, when this is going to happen as a result and be inserted in the borough's financial plan, said Sabo.

"You're expecting a great deal of revenue from this, right?" Smith asked.

"Yes," replied the mayor.

Resident Jack Killeen, who sits on the West Cape May Borough Government Ethics Committee, said it was impossible at this time to project how much revenue the borough would receive.

Resident Jack Killeen believes the borough will spend more money than it makes from cannabis businesses. He also said that a city with problems that may be precipitated.

I want you to know that I am quite a few other neighbors, when this is going to happen as a result and be inserted in the borough's financial plan, said Sabo.

"You're expecting a great deal of revenue from this, right?" Smith asked.

"Yes," replied the mayor.

Resident Jack Killeen, who sits on the West Cape May Borough Government Ethics Committee, said it was impossible at this time to project how much revenue the borough would receive.

Resident Jack Killeen believes the borough will spend more money than it makes from cannabis businesses. He also said that a city with problems that may be precipitated.