City Council squabbles over annual appointments

By JACK FICHTER

CAPE MAY — In a 3-2 vote, City Council reappointed Patricia Hendricks as mayor, John Corrado as deputy mayor and Nikky Panella as Planning Board chair. The council was meeting in a closed session.

A resolution for reappointing Patricia Hendricks to the position of mayor was introduced by Mayor John Corrado, who noted council said last year they would have a resolution of which they would not provide names.

Lear said council could set a policy requiring those with opposing views to work together, but no policy had been set.

Mullock said that you didn’t take that opportunity.

He said two members of the Planning Board are real estate agents, Hendricks, who is a Realtor, and there are only two licensed architects in the borough. Mullock said that you shouldn’t name the Planning Board. Mullock said the resolution would not provide names.

Lear asked City Clerk Patricia Habora how many letters of interest were received for the openings on the Planning Board. She said two letters were received.

Mullock said he had told council that you should have a choice for the Planning Board. She asked how many other members of the Planning Board were nominated and received for the openings, without submitting letters of interest. Lear said council could not fill any appointments in any way interest but no policy had been set.

Hendricks said she continued that the two persons who had written letters of interest and had an intelligent conversation with which to make a decision she noted she did not provide names.

Council passed a resolution regarding the appointments to advisory committees.

Some of the members of the council said it would require an ordinance or a policy to be able to set a policy to request names.

Moffat said that the three houses that could name all are unique cases.

The goal is the most compassionate that you can get, he said. Where can we go with that?

Moffat said he hoped board council would have approved the resolution one year ago when it was first introduced instead of after council passed the appointment.

Lear said the council would name the names and qualifications of interested personnel.

Council will be notified by the clerk of those interested and each council member will be notified of the names and qualifications of interested personnel.

Moffat said he had hoped board council would have approved the resolution one year ago when it was first introduced instead of after council passed the appointment. Council did not set a policy regarding the appointments to advisory committees or establish the resolution.

Mullock said Mullock had been appointed without any bidding. “I think we need to bid out services within the county past three years. I think we need to bid out services within the county past three years.”

Mullock was appointed without any bidding.”
