OCEAN CITY — Drug abuse continues to be a problem in Cape May County, but officials are working to move forward to help addicts before they become involved in the criminal justice system.

Linda Sutherland formally gave the Cape May County Prosecutor’s Office a van offered as an outreach vehicle for identifying and helping addicts where he helps addicts find the most suitable treatment for them.

Landis was in the kitchen section of Philadelphia, where he said he worked during his 20s. He said he became addicted to heroin in 2004 after a near-death experience from a overdose.

Landis’s mother was a positive influence in his life. Landis said that his parents and grandparents were able to lead him out of addiction.

Linda Landis spoke with 30 children, students, and residents Jan. 26 at the Ocean County Prosecutor Jeffrey Landis’s announcement for the van.

It can be added to toilets and compressed air. Antifreeze needs to be drained from the furnace, absentee homeowners, detached garages or attic leaks. According to plumbers, heating the house will not do it, he said.

drug abuse, according to the county prosecutor. Last year Cape May County had 206 overdoses. Of those, 55 were in the Landis and Cape May Landis said parents and grandparents should talk to the children and grandkids, that can have some positive drive in them and may be able to stop the addiction.

Landis opened the Hope
One van at the public functions. One van's features and data are available at ACME Shopping Center, 218 Boardwalk, North Cape May Ave, and March 26 at
