Lawmakers seek flood insurance reform

Continued from Page A1

has safeguards to stop pre-

Writing Your Own pro-

Cape May Avenue were resolved.

and phases three and four for communication issues including reconstruction of Pennsylvania Avenue.

Continued from Page A1

Gillin-Schwartz said the communication issues including inaccurate maps and flood prevention investments, it worth it. Lawmakers are pay-homeowners and policy-

policies.

Policymakers with lower-valued homes are paying more than their share of the risk while policymakers with expensive homes are paying less than their share of the risk, FEMA stated.

As for Risk Rating 2.0, consideration building costs, FEMA can equitably distribute premiums across all policyholders based on property’s flood risk.

Safeguards to stop premium rate increases for months to reach a settlement.

Gillin-Schwartz said the settlement involves litigation of a potential contract issue.

Deputy Mayor Stacy Mau-

clan asked whether the amount of money is a small fraction of the city's outstanding bills, the city's chief financial officer.

The settlement is much larger than some of the contributions the city has made,

City Manager Tim Thom-

son said. He said some of the contributions the city has made

are working hard to see our flooding victims and the city is underpaid Mott

MacDonald but spent a "ton of money," Mullock said.

and the amount of money is a small fraction of the city's outstanding bills, the city is

"It's the city's flood policy, so survivors get what they need, and it will bring much-needed accountability to the process so survivors get what they need to rebuild,

North. For more information on how to please join us on

Mass Daily at 11am

Sat. at 4pm

609-884-5312

609-884-3466

STAR OF

JAZZ

www.vimsj.org / 609-463-5220

DR. AND MRS. EUGENE SIEGEL

ADA AND JACK STEINBERG

LORRAINE CRAVEN

A4 WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 1, 2021

Lawmakers seek flood insurance reform

Continued from Page A1

Gillin-Schwartz said the communication issues including

inaccurate maps and flood

prevention investments, it

worth it. Lawmakers are pay-

homeowners and policy-

policies.

Policymakers with lower-

valued homes are paying more than their share of the risk while policymakers with expensive homes are paying less than their share of the risk, FEMA stated.

As for Risk Rating 2.0, consideration building costs, FEMA can equitably distribute premiums across all policyholders based on property’s flood risk.

Safeguards to stop premium rate increases for months to reach a settlement.

Gillin-Schwartz said the settlement involves litigation of a potential contract issue.

Deputy Mayor Stacy Mau-

clan asked whether the amount of money is a small fraction of the city's outstanding bills,

the city's chief financial officer.

The settlement is much

larger than some of the contributions the city has made,

City Manager Tim Thom-

son said. He said some of the contributions the city has made

are working hard to see

our flooding victims and

the city is underpaid Mott

MacDonald but spent a "ton

of money," Mullock said.

and the amount of money is a small fraction of the city's outstanding bills, the city is

"It's the city's flood policy,

so survivors get what they need, and it will bring much-

needed accountability to

the process so survivors get

what they need to rebuild,

North. For more information on how to please join us on

Mass Daily at 11am

Sat. at 4pm

609-884-5312

609-884-3466

STAR OF

JAZZ

www.vimsj.org / 609-463-5220

DR. AND MRS. EUGENE SIEGEL

ADA AND JACK STEINBERG

LORRAINE CRAVEN

A4 WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 1, 2021

Lawmakers seek flood insurance reform

Continued from Page A1

Gillin-Schwartz said the communication issues including

inaccurate maps and flood

prevention investments, it

worth it. Lawmakers are pay-

homeowners and policy-

policies.

Policymakers with lower-

valued homes are paying more than their share of the risk while policymakers with expensive homes are paying less than their share of the risk, FEMA stated.

As for Risk Rating 2.0, consideration building costs, FEMA can equitably distribute premiums across all policyholders based on property’s flood risk.

Safeguards to stop premium rate increases for months to reach a settlement.

Gillin-Schwartz said the settlement involves litigation of a potential contract issue.

Deputy Mayor Stacy Mau-

clan asked whether the amount of money is a small fraction of the city's outstanding bills,

the city's chief financial officer.

The settlement is much

larger than some of the contributions the city has made,

City Manager Tim Thom-

son said. He said some of the contributions the city has made

are working hard to see

our flooding victims and

the city is underpaid Mott

MacDonald but spent a "ton

of money," Mullock said.

and the amount of money is a small fraction of the city's outstanding bills, the city is

"It's the city's flood policy,

so survivors get what they need, and it will bring much-

needed accountability to

the process so survivors get

what they need to rebuild,

North. For more information on how to please join us on

Mass Daily at 11am

Sat. at 4pm

609-884-5312

609-884-3466

STAR OF

JAZZ

www.vimsj.org / 609-463-5220

DR. AND MRS. EUGENE SIEGEL

ADA AND JACK STEINBERG

LORRAINE CRAVEN