CAPE MAY — The Taxpayers Association of Cape May has released a five-year plan for Cape May County to consider. The association is recommending the council consider all and weigh all sources of expertise, conduct public hearings, identify models of revenue sources and redistributional taxation to consider the effect of the county's budgeting process. The association wanted to present a picture of how consolidation, common sense and "fair and equitable" tax structure was in "the best interest of the local sittingbody," Crowley said.

The association is recommending the council consider all and weigh all sources of expertise, conduct public hearings, identify models of revenue sources and redistributional taxation to consider the effect of the county's budgeting process. The association wanted to present a picture of how consolidation, common sense and "fair and equitable" tax structure was in "the best interest of the local sittingbody," Crowley said.

"We believe the future is bright in some areas in Cape May," Crowley said. "We believe we are doing the best we can in the best interest of the local population and the best interest of the local economy."

The association is recommending the council consider all and weigh all sources of expertise, conduct public hearings, identify models of revenue sources and redistributional taxation to consider the effect of the county's budgeting process. The association wanted to present a picture of how consolidation, common sense and "fair and equitable" tax structure was in "the best interest of the local sittingbody," Crowley said.

"We believe the future is bright in some areas in Cape May," Crowley said. "We believe we are doing the best we can in the best interest of the local population and the best interest of the local economy."

The association is recommending the council consider all and weigh all sources of expertise, conduct public hearings, identify models of revenue sources and redistributional taxation to consider the effect of the county's budgeting process. The association wanted to present a picture of how consolidation, common sense and "fair and equitable" tax structure was in "the best interest of the local sittingbody," Crowley said.

"We believe the future is bright in some areas in Cape May," Crowley said. "We believe we are doing the best we can in the best interest of the local population and the best interest of the local economy."

The association is recommending the council consider all and weigh all sources of expertise, conduct public hearings, identify models of revenue sources and redistributional taxation to consider the effect of the county's budgeting process. The association wanted to present a picture of how consolidation, common sense and "fair and equitable" tax structure was in "the best interest of the local sittingbody," Crowley said.

"We believe the future is bright in some areas in Cape May," Crowley said. "We believe we are doing the best we can in the best interest of the local population and the best interest of the local economy."

The association is recommending the council consider all and weigh all sources of expertise, conduct public hearings, identify models of revenue sources and redistributional taxation to consider the effect of the county's budgeting process. The association wanted to present a picture of how consolidation, common sense and "fair and equitable" tax structure was in "the best interest of the local sittingbody," Crowley said.

"We believe the future is bright in some areas in Cape May," Crowley said. "We believe we are doing the best we can in the best interest of the local population and the best interest of the local economy."

The association is recommending the council consider all and weigh all sources of expertise, conduct public hearings, identify models of revenue sources and redistributional taxation to consider the effect of the county's budgeting process. The association wanted to present a picture of how consolidation, common sense and "fair and equitable" tax structure was in "the best interest of the local sittingbody," Crowley said.

"We believe the future is bright in some areas in Cape May," Crowley said. "We believe we are doing the best we can in the best interest of the local population and the best interest of the local economy."

The association is recommending the council consider all and weigh all sources of expertise, conduct public hearings, identify models of revenue sources and redistributional taxation to consider the effect of the county's budgeting process. The association wanted to present a picture of how consolidation, common sense and "fair and equitable" tax structure was in "the best interest of the local sittingbody," Crowley said.

"We believe the future is bright in some areas in Cape May," Crowley said. "We believe we are doing the best we can in the best interest of the local population and the best interest of the local economy."

The association is recommending the council consider all and weigh all sources of expertise, conduct public hearings, identify models of revenue sources and redistributional taxation to consider the effect of the county's budgeting process. The association wanted to present a picture of how consolidation, common sense and "fair and equitable" tax structure was in "the best interest of the local sittingbody," Crowley said.

"We believe the future is bright in some areas in Cape May," Crowley said. "We believe we are doing the best we can in the best interest of the local population and the best interest of the local economy."

The association is recommending the council consider all and weigh all sources of expertise, conduct public hearings, identify models of revenue sources and redistributional taxation to consider the effect of the county's budgeting process. The association wanted to present a picture of how consolidation, common sense and "fair and equitable" tax structure was in "the best interest of the local sittingbody," Crowley said.

"We believe the future is bright in some areas in Cape May," Crowley said. "We believe we are doing the best we can in the best interest of the local population and the best interest of the local economy."

The association is recommending the council consider all and weigh all sources of expertise, conduct public hearings, identify models of revenue sources and redistributional taxation to consider the effect of the county's budgeting process. The association wanted to present a picture of how consolidation, common sense and "fair and equitable" tax structure was in "the best interest of the local sittingbody," Crowley said.

"We believe the future is bright in some areas in Cape May," Crowley said. "We believe we are doing the best we can in the best interest of the local population and the best interest of the local economy."

The association is recommending the council consider all and weigh all sources of expertise, conduct public hearings, identify models of revenue sources and redistributional taxation to consider the effect of the county's budgeting process. The association wanted to present a picture of how consolidation, common sense and "fair and equitable" tax structure was in "the best interest of the local sittingbody," Crowley said.

"We believe the future is bright in some areas in Cape May," Crowley said. "We believe we are doing the best we can in the best interest of the local population and the best interest of the local economy."

The association is recommending the council consider all and weigh all sources of expertise, conduct public hearings, identify models of revenue sources and redistributional taxation to consider the effect of the county's budgeting process. The association wanted to present a picture of how consolidation, common sense and "fair and equitable" tax structure was in "the best interest of the local sittingbody," Crowley said. 