Continued from page A1

"Since I love him, I am a 'wow, man.' He's coming to Wildwood. I watch every rally he has on TV all over the place. I'm going to Wildwood tonight."

In Dominguez’s opinion, everything he (Trump does, he, in his right. Dolores Albrecht, Cots Neck, attended Trump’s inauguration more than three years ago. Although Albrecht drove down to Wildwood, and camped out overnight at the Wildwoods Convention Center parking lot in preparation for the rally, she was not inside the whole time. Despite the long hours in the cold, she felt she accomplished her goal.

“We’re all friendly. Sharing food, water, giving blankets, chatting among like-minded people. I think people have been good because we’re doing it for our president because we love him. That’s why she said. "He’s been voted in office multiple times, and that’s why she has volunteered for Re- election campaigns for years, said Trump is "the best president.”

She said she liked “what he did for the Catholics in the uniform,” and said she liked “what he did to make Jerusalem the cap- ital of Israel.”

She said she liked “what he did for the Catholics, work on building the wall, and how he wants to make sure that God is number one, and that he’s trying to help out the veterans.”

The atmosphere was "pleasant, not cold," he said.

Conway, who served in the U.S. Navy for 25 years, added that she is trying to help out the veterans. "I just want to hear him talk about the military people and to see how much he cares about the military," Conway said.

None of the other supporters coming to Wildwood was not about watching Trump speak, but about being around like-minded people and enjoying the at-

Protesters rally against the president

Continued from page A1

welcome to Wildwood, we plan to vote against them.

Cape May County In- dividuals formed in 2016 to keep President Trump out of the White House, "We’re a group of patriots who protect the nation with a flag background and silhouette of a soldier sal-uting."

Foster said he had no plans to vote with the crowd supporting Trump. "But that’s not me and I’m not changing me for any president,” he said.

"I think what he is doing is right. He’s not changing me for any president,” he said.

Albrecht also appreci- ated that Trump donated money to a charity, "The economy is won- dful,” she said.

She was also concerned about what she felt would happen if “the Democrats get into office, and I’m not concerned about the economy."

Nick Conway, of Wild- wood, set up camp in the parking lot around 4 p.m. on Jan. 28, about 12 hours before Trump was set to take the stage. The atmosphere was "pleasant, not cold," he said.

Conway, who served in the U.S. Navy for 25 years, added that she is trying to help out the veterans. "I just want to hear him talk about the military people and to see how much he cares about the military," Conway said.

None of the other supporters coming to Wildwood was not about watching Trump speak, but about being around like-minded people and enjoying the at-

Continued from page A1

"Since I love him, I am a 'wow, man.' He’s coming to Wildwood. I watch every rally he has on TV all over the place. I’m going to Wildwood tonight."