WVANON — New Jersey’s lawmakers have requested a public hearing to discuss the county’s approval of a coastal area for offshore oil drilling.

In May, the Senate’s Committee on the Environment approved a bill to allow offshore oil drilling in Cape May County. The bill was part of a larger package to address the state’s energy needs.

The legislation was introduced by state Sen. Bob Andrzejczak, who represents Cape May County. The bill would allow the county to issue permits for offshore oil drilling in the county’s coastal areas.

Andrzejczak said the bill would help the county meet its energy needs and create jobs. However, the bill has faced opposition from environmental groups who say it would harm the environment.

The Senate’s Committee on the Environment approved the bill on a 7-2 vote. The bill now moves to the Assembly for consideration.

In June, the House of Representatives approved a similar bill. The bill was introduced by state Rep. Frank G. Petrillo, who represents Cape May County.

Petrillo said the bill would help the county meet its energy needs and create jobs. However, the bill has faced opposition from environmental groups who say it would harm the environment.
