erma — The Builder’s Club at the Richard H. Teitelman School prepared 20 boxes of Thanksgiving food for needy families in the Lower Township area. The bags were delivered to homes before the weekend so people have time to defrost their turkeys and other food and make plans for the meal.

The Builder’s Club at the Richard H. Teitelman School in Lower Township gathered food and packaged it for distribution to 20 needy families in the area. This was the first service project for the club.

The club, which is part of Keratin Cape of May, is spearheading the food drive and collected most of the food from the area post office, Boy Scouts, and other organizations.

In many cases the delivery of all the ingredients for a Thanksgiving dinner is a surprise for the children of families in need but not for their parents.

Tons of large reusable plastic grocery bags were 12- to 15-pound turkeys and the side items needed for a Thanksgiving dinner. Schuldt said most of the turkeys were donated by teachers or families involved in the program with the Builder’s Club.

‘It’s kind of overwhelming to know there’s this many families in need but it’s also encouraging to see the community rally behind them and make sure that they can have the Thanksgiving that everybody else gets to have,” he said.

This Thanksgiving was the first year of the Builder’s Club taking on the project.

Community Food Closet serves food-insecure

CAPEMAY — While this time of year brings guests to those in need, it has an active food closet, the Community Food Closet that supplied local residents in need of food for Thanksgiving.

Director Tina Johnson said food normally is distributed to residents of the Cape May area in the township, “People really embraced the idea that they could give back to their friends if they have a dinner party,” she said.

The food was distributed to local families in need with free food for Thanksgiving.

The company, which is located near the Cape May Mall, provides food and other items to families in need.

Campbell gets house arrest in theft from PBA

Lower Twp. man also charged with embezzling from Local 59

Trenton — A retired police officer who formerly served as president and first vice-delegate of New Jersey Police Benevolent Association, who was sentenced Monday for embezzling about $105,000 from the union over five years of probation. He must submit to electronic monitoring and as an ankle bracelet.
