CAPE MAY — During the second session of a disciplinary hearing March 4 for police Capt. Robert Sheehan, testimony from former Police Chief Diane Sorantino contradicted testimony from Cape City Police Officer Doug Henderson regarding fear of retaliation from the commander.

Sorantino said she witnessed Sheehan, Lear and Sheehan’s former partner, Officer Gary Gallaccio, taking firearm qualification tests in the presence of Sheehan’s commander, Chief Howard Sorantino, who also failed to qualify.

“My knowledge of the events from March 16, 1999, was that two employees were scheduled to take their written examination and two employees were scheduled to take their firearm examination,” said Sorantino, who was chief at the time. “I sat at this table since 1990,” said Sorantino.

“I have received little to nothing in support. It’s a civil rights issue.
