CAPE MAY — A geophysical investigation at the site of a former marine terminal building in Cape May Point has turned up evidence of an additional underground storage tank.

From 1853 to 1937, the plant had a议事会 for heating, cooking and lighting in the process, butane, Naphthalene and other chemicals were left underground.

Through a number of mergers, Jersey Central Power and Light (JCP&L), inherited the site, which includes the town’s dog park and property along the corner of St. Johns and Lafayette streets. JCP&L has been designing a remediation plan that requires the approval of the state Department of Environmental Protection.

JCP&L spokesperson Ron Mooney told the Star and Wave that a recent underground test identified a metallic assembly consistent with the signature of an underground storage tank.

“The things are not uncommon in association with former MGP manufactured-gas plants sites,” he said. “If it is confirmed, we will be removed at joint cost of our remedial action,” he continued.

Change of the site is running behind schedule.

A draft of a remedial work plan submitted to the city in 2011 called for the permitting process to begin in September.

The first-season construction of containment structures was projected to begin in October 2012 and conclude by May 2013. Second-season construction was planned for February 2013. Third-season construction would be in May 2013.

JCP&L may have found an underground tank at Lafayette Street.

CAPE MAY STAR AND WAVE
CAPE MAY POINT — Borough Commission approved its 2014 budget, which calls for an increase in the local tax rate.

Water and sewer bills will each include a 2 percent increase due to increased expenses.

At last week’s Borough Com- mission meeting, Audible Glen Ortman and the borough was $40,000 under a 2 percent state levy cap. The 2 percent increase in the local tax is due to increased expenses.

The tax rate will remain at 25 cents per $100 of assessed value.

Ortman said the water/sewer utility did not have a good year in 2013. The utility’s surplus at the end of 2013 was $72,700, which $72,700 is being used in 2014’s budget. He said the water/sewer utility tax was but $72,700 was used in 2014 budget. He said the water/sewer utility tax was but $72,700 was used in 2014.

Increase in Cape May is a treat for many.
