Seasonal-job outlook mixed in Cape May

By KRISTEN KELLEHER

OCEAN CITY — A still-recovering economy affects Ocean City’s seasonal industry in different ways, although the once seasonal tourist season appears to be running more smoothly and continuously this year.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates several resorts and restaurants in the area, has seen its applications, both online and in person, drop off in the past few years. But it has not seen any major changes in the past couple of months, said its general manager of human resources, John Cioeta.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates Beach Plum Farm, Orange Grille and Bar, and the Star and Surf Restaurants, along with several others, has seen a steady flow of applications this year, Cioeta said.

“We appreciate it. We’re being hit hard like everyone else,” he said. "But we’re not seeing any major changes that would affect us.

Economy drives older workers into limited seasonal-job pool

By KRISTEN KELLEHER

OCEAN CITY — A still-recovering economy affects Ocean City’s seasonal industry in different ways, although the once seasonal tourist season appears to be running more smoothly and continuously this year.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates several resorts and restaurants in the area, has seen its applications, both online and in person, drop off in the past few years. But it has not seen any major changes in the past couple of months, said its general manager of human resources, John Cioeta.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates Beach Plum Farm, Orange Grille and Bar, and the Star and Surf Restaurants, along with several others, has seen a steady flow of applications this year, Cioeta said.

“We appreciate it. We’re being hit hard like everyone else,” he said. "But we’re not seeing any major changes that would affect us.

Economy drives older workers into limited seasonal-job pool

By KRISTEN KELLEHER

OCEAN CITY — A still-recovering economy affects Ocean City’s seasonal industry in different ways, although the once seasonal tourist season appears to be running more smoothly and continuously this year.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates several resorts and restaurants in the area, has seen its applications, both online and in person, drop off in the past few years. But it has not seen any major changes in the past couple of months, said its general manager of human resources, John Cioeta.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates Beach Plum Farm, Orange Grille and Bar, and the Star and Surf Restaurants, along with several others, has seen a steady flow of applications this year, Cioeta said.

“We appreciate it. We’re being hit hard like everyone else,” he said. "But we’re not seeing any major changes that would affect us.

Economy drives older workers into limited seasonal-job pool

By KRISTEN KELLEHER

OCEAN CITY — A still-recovering economy affects Ocean City’s seasonal industry in different ways, although the once seasonal tourist season appears to be running more smoothly and continuously this year.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates several resorts and restaurants in the area, has seen its applications, both online and in person, drop off in the past few years. But it has not seen any major changes in the past couple of months, said its general manager of human resources, John Cioeta.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates Beach Plum Farm, Orange Grille and Bar, and the Star and Surf Restaurants, along with several others, has seen a steady flow of applications this year, Cioeta said.

“We appreciate it. We’re being hit hard like everyone else,” he said. "But we’re not seeing any major changes that would affect us.

Economy drives older workers into limited seasonal-job pool

By KRISTEN KELLEHER

OCEAN CITY — A still-recovering economy affects Ocean City’s seasonal industry in different ways, although the once seasonal tourist season appears to be running more smoothly and continuously this year.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates several resorts and restaurants in the area, has seen its applications, both online and in person, drop off in the past few years. But it has not seen any major changes in the past couple of months, said its general manager of human resources, John Cioeta.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates Beach Plum Farm, Orange Grille and Bar, and the Star and Surf Restaurants, along with several others, has seen a steady flow of applications this year, Cioeta said.

“We appreciate it. We’re being hit hard like everyone else,” he said. "But we’re not seeing any major changes that would affect us.

Economy drives older workers into limited seasonal-job pool

By KRISTEN KELLEHER

OCEAN CITY — A still-recovering economy affects Ocean City’s seasonal industry in different ways, although the once seasonal tourist season appears to be running more smoothly and continuously this year.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates several resorts and restaurants in the area, has seen its applications, both online and in person, drop off in the past few years. But it has not seen any major changes in the past couple of months, said its general manager of human resources, John Cioeta.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates Beach Plum Farm, Orange Grille and Bar, and the Star and Surf Restaurants, along with several others, has seen a steady flow of applications this year, Cioeta said.

“We appreciate it. We’re being hit hard like everyone else,” he said. "But we’re not seeing any major changes that would affect us.

Economy drives older workers into limited seasonal-job pool

By KRISTEN KELLEHER

OCEAN CITY — A still-recovering economy affects Ocean City’s seasonal industry in different ways, although the once seasonal tourist season appears to be running more smoothly and continuously this year.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates several resorts and restaurants in the area, has seen its applications, both online and in person, drop off in the past few years. But it has not seen any major changes in the past couple of months, said its general manager of human resources, John Cioeta.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates Beach Plum Farm, Orange Grille and Bar, and the Star and Surf Restaurants, along with several others, has seen a steady flow of applications this year, Cioeta said.

“We appreciate it. We’re being hit hard like everyone else,” he said. "But we’re not seeing any major changes that would affect us.

Economy drives older workers into limited seasonal-job pool

By KRISTEN KELLEHER

OCEAN CITY — A still-recovering economy affects Ocean City’s seasonal industry in different ways, although the once seasonal tourist season appears to be running more smoothly and continuously this year.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates several resorts and restaurants in the area, has seen its applications, both online and in person, drop off in the past few years. But it has not seen any major changes in the past couple of months, said its general manager of human resources, John Cioeta.

Cape Resorts Group, which operates Beach Plum Farm, Orange Grille and Bar, and the Star and Surf Restaurants, along with several others, has seen a steady flow of applications this year, Cioeta said.

“We appreciate it. We’re being hit hard like everyone else,” he said. "But we’re not seeing any major changes that would affect us.