Cape May likely to settle with Prosecutor’s Office

By Jack Fichter

CAPE MAY — City Council met into closed session Monday morning to consider whether a settlement agreement is forthcoming that would end the legal battle between Cape May and the county.

The city is arguing the Prosecutor’s Office “that we’ve all agreed to” is interfering with its ability to operate the police department.

Cape May County has not finished investigating the prosecutor’s actions that will be impacted by the construction, Mayor Pat Kiernan reported at a June 3 Borough Committee meeting.

County budget cap hinders bid to hire new firefighters

By Jack Fichter

CAPE MAY — The graying of the city’s population is diminishing the number of able-bodied volunteer firefighters and hindering the city’s ability to buy essential equipment.

A fire department review committee appointed by the city council held its first public meeting May 28. The committee included��most the city’s department heads, a liaison from City Council and two public members.

By Betty Wund

Spiced to the Star and Wave

WEST CAPE MAY — It was hoped it would be done by this summer, but it never happened. Now Cape May County’s Roundabout, a $2 million project, is already in the planning stage.

Tips for weathering the storm.

City sued, seeking removal of police department monitor

By Jack Fichter

CAPE MAY — City Council met Monday afternoon to consider whether a settlement agreement is forthcoming that would end the legal battle between Cape May and the county.

The city is arguing the Prosecutor’s Office “that we’ve all agreed to” is interfering with its ability to operate the police department.

Cape May County has not finished investigating the prosecutor’s actions that will be impacted by the construction, Mayor Pat Kiernan reported at a June 3 Borough Committee meeting.