CAPE MAY MUST PAY FULL COST OF SPECIAL ELECTION

Cape May may have to pay the full cost of a special election for a board seat in its regional school district if the city is permitted to withdraw from the Lower Cape May Regional School District.

City trying to withdraw from Lower Cape May Regional School District

The loss of casino jobs in Atlantic City may be a game changer for Cape May County over the next 20 years, according to the U.S. Census demographic of that group.

Group of supporters consists of merchants, real estate bankers, representatives of nonprofit arts and nature organizations, accommodations, county and city chambers of commerce and agents.

Merchant group tries to raise funds to bring PBS show to Cape May

A group of supporters consisting of merchants, real estate bankers, representatives of nonprofit arts and nature organizations, accommodations, county and city chambers of commerce and agents, met with the producer of “Getting Away Together.”

A crew from the city of Cape May, Lower Township and West Cape May Township will go to the polls in a special election on Aug. 19 to decide whether the city is permitted to withdraw from the Lower Cape May Regional School District.

Chugging along at Historic Cold Spring Village

Chugging along at Historic Cold Spring Village on July 26 during its Railroad Days weekend of events, which featured operating model railroads and merchandise.

Retirees likely will dominate entire county

Forecast 2034: A special election could cost the entire county of $40,587.

Kim Royster/Special to the CAPE MAY STAR AND WAVE

At top, Greg’s Train, engineered by Tim Laing, gives children a ride through Historic Cold Spring Village on July 26 during its Railroad Days weekend of events, which featured operating model railroads and merchandise.

According to a letter from local merchants, a group of individuals from the Cape May community met with the producer of “Getting Away Together.”

See the letter, page A5