City criticized for role in Papal Mass broadcast

Group contends Cape May violating separation of church, state

By JACK FICHTER
Cape May Star and Wave

CAPE MAY — Americans United for Separation of Church and State has filed a lawsuit against the city of Cape May alleging that the city is violating the constitutional separation of church and state.

The lawsuit was filed by Americans United for Separation of Church and State on behalf of The Upper Township Salvation Army, which alleged that the city of Cape May is violating the separation of church and state by allowing the Papal Mass to be broadcast in Cape May.

The suit alleges that the city of Cape May is violating the First Amendment to the United States Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state. The suit also alleges that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state.

The suit seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit also seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit further seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit also seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit further seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit also seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit further seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit also seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit further seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit also seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit further seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit also seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit further seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit also seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit further seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit also seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit further seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit also seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit further seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit also seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit further seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit also seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.

The suit further seeks a declaratory judgment that the city of Cape May is violating the New Jersey Constitution, which provides for the separation of church and state, and an injunction enjoining the city of Cape May from violating the separation of church and state.