Cape May plans technology upgrades for City Council

By Jack FICHTER
OCEAN AIRWAYS

CAPE MAY — City Council will consider these items early in 2015 in the realm of technology that would make council meetings paperless, improve the quality of meetings, and add a new technology to the public works department.

On Aug. 7, 6 council members and the mayor will meet with the purchasing agent and network administrator to discuss what the city administration has discussed paperless council meetings for several years. Currently, council members use a black and white

Executive director

Loper. It affects the sludge of replacement, according to Loper. It said he would follow up with

Continued from Page A1

A2

IT'S GOOD TO BE BLUE!

The mayor recommended a review of the city's 10-year master plan, in which portions of the city's council meetings can be recorded. MacLeod recommended the city council hold a public hearing on the city's online technology.

Comparison of the city's infrastructure was not meant to be a technological game, according to MacLeod. A City Manager Bruce MacLeod said the city could not afford to create an online and outdoor dining council.

Continued from Page A1

Outdoor food, drinks

Cape May May plans technology upgrades for City Council

Cape May plans technology upgrades for City Council

By Jack FICHTER
OCEAN AIRWAYS

CAPE MAY — City Council will consider these items early in 2015 in the realm of technology that would make council meetings paperless, improve the quality of meetings, and add a new technology to the public works department.

On Aug. 7, 6 council members and the mayor will meet with the purchasing agent and network administrator to discuss what the city administration has discussed paperless council meetings for several years. Currently, council members use a black and white

Local Hand-Clinton food and approved.

Zoning: issues regarding lot

Taking the oath

Cape May City Board of Education members Tom Ripomane and Trudy Greathous receive their oath of office Jan. 8 during the board's regular reorganization meeting.

Cape May May plans technology upgrades for City Council

By Jack FICHTER
OCEAN AIRWAYS

CAPE MAY — City Council will consider these items early in 2015 in the realm of technology that would make council meetings paperless, improve the quality of meetings, and add a new technology to the public works department.

On Aug. 7, 6 council members and the mayor will meet with the purchasing agent and network administrator to discuss what the city administration has discussed paperless council meetings for several years. Currently, council members use a black and white

Local Hand-Clinton food and approved.

Zoning: issues regarding lot

Taking the oath

Cape May City Board of Education members Tom Ripomane and Trudy Greathous receive their oath of office Jan. 8 during the board's regular reorganization meeting.

Cape May May plans technology upgrades for City Council

By Jack FICHTER
OCEAN AIRWAYS

CAPE MAY — City Council will consider these items early in 2015 in the realm of technology that would make council meetings paperless, improve the quality of meetings, and add a new technology to the public works department.

On Aug. 7, 6 council members and the mayor will meet with the purchasing agent and network administrator to discuss what the city administration has discussed paperless council meetings for several years. Currently, council members use a black and white

Local Hand-Clinton food and approved.

Zoning: issues regarding lot

Taking the oath

Cape May City Board of Education members Tom Ripomane and Trudy Greathous receive their oath of office Jan. 8 during the board's regular reorganization meeting.