Food pantry struggling to meet need

Continued from Page A1
many back on track and that they are adequate for all their needs.

Wosch and the food pantry also was a member of people on some sort of disability. He said the church and the food pantry they are able to partner with other organisations and help with the employment needs.

"We try our best to comply with the individual for that medical job, and that helps with the employment act," he said.

"We try our best to keep the pantry to stay close to their disability needs because we want to help them reduce their
income and keep them employed."

There are a lot of families that come in with two or three kinds. Wosch said. "Sometimes it is because of the situtions that we have to keep up with other openations and be able to support the ministry of the church.
We have a lot of people that are not able to pay for their monthly expenses and then they have to have food that is available on the shelf for them.

"We have a lot of people that are retired or have a health problem or have a disability and it helps to have food that is available on the shelf for them.

"We try our best to keep the pantry to stay close to their dis-
ability needs because we want to help them reduce their
income and keep them employed."

"I remember as a child with my par-
dents when we brought our kids to
a food pantry to help support our family." Wosch added. "It is a familiar situation to offer food
that is adequate for all their needs.

"We have people who are in
economic situations that we need to offer food that is adequately for all their needs."

"We have people who are in
economic situations that we
need to offer food that is ade-
quately for all their needs."

"We try our best to keep the pantry to stay close to their dis-
ability needs because we want to help them reduce their
income and keep them employed."

"I remember as a child with my par-
dents when we brought our kids to
a food pantry to help support our
family." Wosch added. "It is a
familiar situation to offer food
that is adequate for all their needs.

"We have people who are in
economic situations that we
need to offer food that is ade-
quately for all their needs."

"We try our best to keep the pantry to stay close to their dis-
ability needs because we want to help them reduce their
income and keep them employed."

"I remember as a child with my par-
dents when we brought our kids to
a food pantry to help support our
family." Wosch added. "It is a
familiar situation to offer food
that is adequate for all their needs.

"We have people who are in
economic situations that we
need to offer food that is ade-
quately for all their needs."

"We try our best to keep the pantry to stay close to their dis-
ability needs because we want to help them reduce their
income and keep them employed."

"I remember as a child with my par-
dents when we brought our kids to
a food pantry to help support our
family." Wosch added. "It is a
familiar situation to offer food
that is adequate for all their needs.

"We have people who are in
economic situations that we
need to offer food that is ade-
quately for all their needs."

"We try our best to keep the pantry to stay close to their dis-
ability needs because we want to help them reduce their
income and keep them employed."

"I remember as a child with my par-
dents when we brought our kids to
a food pantry to help support our
family." Wosch added. "It is a
familiar situation to offer food
that is adequate for all their needs.

"We have people who are in
economic situations that we
need to offer food that is ade-
quately for all their needs."

"We try our best to keep the pantry to stay close to their dis-
ability needs because we want to help them reduce their
income and keep them employed."

"I remember as a child with my par-
dents when we brought our kids to
a food pantry to help support our
family." Wosch added. "It is a
familiar situation to offer food
that is adequate for all their needs.

"We have people who are in
economic situations that we
need to offer food that is ade-
quately for all their needs."

"We try our best to keep the pantry to stay close to their dis-
ability needs because we want to help them reduce their
income and keep them employed."

"I remember as a child with my par-
dents when we brought our kids to
a food pantry to help support our
family." Wosch added. "It is a
familiar situation to offer food
that is adequate for all their needs.

"We have people who are in
economic situations that we
need to offer food that is ade-
quately for all their needs."

"We try our best to keep the pantry to stay close to their dis-
ability needs because we want to help them reduce their
income and keep them employed."

"I remember as a child with my par-
dents when we brought our kids to
a food pantry to help support our
family." Wosch added. "It is a
familiar situation to offer food
that is adequate for all their needs.

"We have people who are in
economic situations that we
need to offer food that is ade-
quately for all their needs."

"We try our best to keep the pantry to stay close to their dis-
ability needs because we want to help them reduce their
income and keep them employed."

"I remember as a child with my par-
dents when we brought our kids to
a food pantry to help support our
family." Wosch added. "It is a
familiar situation to offer food
that is adequate for all their needs.

"We have people who are in
economic situations that we
need to offer food that is ade-
quately for all their needs."

"We try our best to keep the pantry to stay close to their dis-
ability needs because we want to help them reduce their
income and keep them employed."

"I remember as a child with my par-
dents when we brought our kids to
a food pantry to help support our
family." Wosch added. "It is a
familiar situation to offer food
that is adequate for all their needs.

"We have people who are in
economic situations that we
need to offer food that is ade-
quately for all their needs."

"We try our best to keep the pantry to stay close to their dis-
ability needs because we want to help them reduce their
income and keep them employed."

"I remember as a child with my par-
dents when we brought our kids to
a food pantry to help support our
family." Wosch added. "It is a
familiar situation to offer food
that is adequate for all their needs.

"We have people who are in
economic situations that we
need to offer food that is ade-
quately for all their needs."

"We try our best to keep the pantry to stay close to their dis-
ability needs because we want to help them reduce their
income and keep them employed."

"I remember as a child with my par-
dents when we brought our kids to
a food pantry to help support our
family." Wosch added. "It is a
familiar situation to offer food
that is adequate for all their needs.

"We have people who are in
economic situations that we
need to offer food that is ade-
quately for all their needs."

"We try our best to keep the pantry to stay close to their dis-
ability needs because we want to help them reduce their
income and keep them employed."

"I remember as a child with my par-
dents when we brought our kids to
a food pantry to help support our
family." Wosch added. "It is a
familiar situation to offer food
that is adequate for all their needs.