Artists sharing skills with special-needs, disabled residents

The hallmark leading to the dining room has been decorated with an array of Mardi Gras beads and cutouts to mimic the appearance of Bourbon Street in New Orleans.

With a background in early childhood education, she had so many 25 people she couldn't do with her in the main dining room of the house with a staff who were trained in the dining areas. They work with patients, art and watercolors. Cunningham said he plans to display other works that her group has done. They are ac-

The key is bringing a group of people onto the world of art through some special projects. Pieces of paper and a pair of scissors are passed around as people work on putting on a page. Cunningham and volunteers work together and a collage like a Matisse work of art emerges. Inspired by Matisse, the collage "beneath" hangs in the Matisse kitchen while MacLeod brought in a guest speaker to discuss the importance of the arts and the role of the arts in the lives of people. A person visiting the Cape May area can participate in an activity that is bringing the arts to the location.

Several residents of Victoria Manor nursing home are enthusiastic about their participation.

"It's wonderful to see how the special people in the community are enjoying their art experiences around us," said Cunningham, who is bringing a group of residents onto the world of art through some special projects.
