Peek leaders

Continued from Page 62

leaders, which asks students to select a topic and present it to their peers. The goal is to foster critical thinking skills and encourage students to think creatively.

Chiarella said her advice for students is to always be passionate and pursue their dreams. "If you believe, you can achieve," she said.

Surrounded by positive people and push away anything negative, she offered. "Berry and I are still roommates where she is today."

"Don't let anything get in your way, don't let anyone tell you you can't," she said.

Berry, a current junior at Cedar Crest College in Allentown, said meeting her greatest accomplishment was the Cape May County Prosecutors Office. "I'm paying it forward and always trying to develop the core requirements and guiding those younger than you," she said.

Nocito said his greatest accomplishment was the Cape May County Prosecutors Office. "I see people become successful, you become an inspiration," he continued.

Chiarella's greatest achievement was running an agency in New York for high school students to go to college. "Whatever you want to do, explore," he said.

While some are not greatly affected by the experiment, it's a roll of the dice with mood swings and reactions, Nocito said.

"All these things are deterrents and road blocks that can take people away from their dreams," she said. "Do you have to do what you think is right, do it in a way that's going to make it work for you and your dreams."

People who learn to overcome barriers and deterrents are going to go much further and they are surely going to succeed," Berry said.

"You should have some sort of idea because people who don’t have goals are less likely to succeed," she said. "If you don’t know where you’re going, you don’t know how to get there."