Economy drives older workers into limited job pool

Continued from Page A2

many employers are seeking 55- and older applicants to seek seasonal jobs.

The aging workforce is also a challenge for seasonal employers. According to a recent study by the University of New Hampshire, 23% of the nation’s seasonal employers are looking for workers with a level of mobility that is not always a benefit for those older workers.

The city does not keep records of seasonal and older workers, although Cioeta said the city hires many middle-aged and older seasonal workers. The city has more than 600 seasonal employees annually.

Cioeta noted, however, that the seasonal workforce is very variable, with the number of seasonal workers depending on the city's budget.

The city hires employees to participate in work and study-based activities, and allows the DOL to charge fees sufficient to cover the full cost of providing the services. The DOL, according to Brian Hartley, temporary employment and seasonal job placement, hires as many J-1 workers as it can because of the issues with attracting and retaining the city's seasonal workforce.

While many seasonal workers may be rehired, the city has not experienced significant growth in the number of seasonal workers, and Cioeta said the city will continue to work on attracting and retaining seasonal workers.

Lobster House Restaurant Manager Mark Frank said his restaurant employs employees to work in the restaurant, including 25 of the 230 seasonal employees.

The city of Cape May employs 600 people year-round, including 250 city employees and 500 seasonal employees.

The city did not keep records of seasonal and older workers, although Cioeta said the city hires many middle-aged and older seasonal workers. The city has more than 600 seasonal employees annually.

Cioeta noted, however, that the seasonal workforce is very variable, with the number of seasonal workers depending on the city's budget.

The city hires employees to participate in work and study-based activities, and allows the DOL to charge fees sufficient to cover the full cost of providing the services. The DOL, according to Brian Hartley, temporary employment and seasonal job placement, hires as many J-1 workers as it can because of the issues with attracting and retaining the city's seasonal workforce.

While many seasonal workers may be rehired, the city has not experienced significant growth in the number of seasonal workers, and Cioeta said the city will continue to work on attracting and retaining seasonal workers.

Lobster House Restaurant Manager Mark Frank said his restaurant employs employees to work in the restaurant, including 25 of the 230 seasonal employees.

The city of Cape May employs 600 people year-round, including 250 city employees and 500 seasonal employees.

The city did not keep records of seasonal and older workers, although Cioeta said the city hires many middle-aged and older seasonal workers. The city has more than 600 seasonal employees annually.

Cioeta noted, however, that the seasonal workforce is very variable, with the number of seasonal workers depending on the city's budget.

The city hires employees to participate in work and study-based activities, and allows the DOL to charge fees sufficient to cover the full cost of providing the services. The DOL, according to Brian Hartley, temporary employment and seasonal job placement, hires as many J-1 workers as it can because of the issues with attracting and retaining the city's seasonal workforce.

While many seasonal workers may be rehired, the city has not experienced significant growth in the number of seasonal workers, and Cioeta said the city will continue to work on attracting and retaining seasonal workers.

Lobster House Restaurant Manager Mark Frank said his restaurant employs employees to work in the restaurant, including 25 of the 230 seasonal employees.

The city of Cape May employs 600 people year-round, including 250 city employees and 500 seasonal employees.

The city did not keep records of seasonal and older workers, although Cioeta said the city hires many middle-aged and older seasonal workers. The city has more than 600 seasonal employees annually.

Cioeta noted, however, that the seasonal workforce is very variable, with the number of seasonal workers depending on the city's budget.

The city hires employees to participate in work and study-based activities, and allows the DOL to charge fees sufficient to cover the full cost of providing the services. The DOL, according to Brian Hartley, temporary employment and seasonal job placement, hires as many J-1 workers as it can because of the issues with attracting and retaining the city's seasonal workforce.

While many seasonal workers may be rehired, the city has not experienced significant growth in the number of seasonal workers, and Cioeta said the city will continue to work on attracting and retaining seasonal workers.

Lobster House Restaurant Manager Mark Frank said his restaurant employs employees to work in the restaurant, including 25 of the 230 seasonal employees.

The city of Cape May employs 600 people year-round, including 250 city employees and 500 seasonal employees.

The city did not keep records of seasonal and older workers, although Cioeta said the city hires many middle-aged and older seasonal workers. The city has more than 600 seasonal employees annually.

Cioeta noted, however, that the seasonal workforce is very variable, with the number of seasonal workers depending on the city's budget.

The city hires employees to participate in work and study-based activities, and allows the DOL to charge fees sufficient to cover the full cost of providing the services. The DOL, according to Brian Hartley, temporary employment and seasonal job placement, hires as many J-1 workers as it can because of the issues with attracting and retaining the city's seasonal workforce.

While many seasonal workers may be rehired, the city has not experienced significant growth in the number of seasonal workers, and Cioeta said the city will continue to work on attracting and retaining seasonal workers.

Lobster House Restaurant Manager Mark Frank said his restaurant employs employees to work in the restaurant, including 25 of the 230 seasonal employees.

The city of Cape May employs 600 people year-round, including 250 city employees and 500 seasonal employees.

The city did not keep records of seasonal and older workers, although Cioeta said the city hires many middle-aged and older seasonal workers. The city has more than 600 seasonal employees annually.

Cioeta noted, however, that the seasonal workforce is very variable, with the number of seasonal workers depending on the city's budget.

The city hires employees to participate in work and study-based activities, and allows the DOL to charge fees sufficient to cover the full cost of providing the services. The DOL, according to Brian Hartley, temporary employment and seasonal job placement, hires as many J-1 workers as it can because of the issues with attracting and retaining the city's seasonal workforce.

While many seasonal workers may be rehired, the city has not experienced significant growth in the number of seasonal workers, and Cioeta said the city will continue to work on attracting and retaining seasonal workers.

Lobster House Restaurant Manager Mark Frank said his restaurant employs employees to work in the restaurant, including 25 of the 230 seasonal employees.

The city of Cape May employs 600 people year-round, including 250 city employees and 500 seasonal employees.

The city did not keep records of seasonal and older workers, although Cioeta said the city hires many middle-aged and older seasonal workers. The city has more than 600 seasonal employees annually.

Cioeta noted, however, that the seasonal workforce is very variable, with the number of seasonal workers depending on the city's budget.

The city hires employees to participate in work and study-based activities, and allows the DOL to charge fees sufficient to cover the full cost of providing the services. The DOL, according to Brian Hartley, temporary employment and seasonal job placement, hires as many J-1 workers as it can because of the issues with attracting and retaining the city's seasonal workforce.

While many seasonal workers may be rehired, the city has not experienced significant growth in the number of seasonal workers, and Cioeta said the city will continue to work on attracting and retaining seasonal workers.