Cape May may revamp Welcome Center, offer parking on tracks

The Friends of the Fishing Creek School have an option to acquire the long-unused train tracks adjacent to the building. They have decided to pursue this option and have been working with the state to acquire the tracks. The state has been receptive to the idea and has expressed a willingness to sell the tracks to the Friends. The Friends are now working with the city of Cape May to finalize the purchase and to develop a plan for the use of the tracks.

The tracks were originally used for a rail line that ran from Ocean City to Cape May. The line was abandoned in the 1960s and the tracks have since been abandoned and overgrown. The Friends have expressed interest in using the tracks for a variety of purposes, including a bike path, a walking path, and as a trail for hikers. The Friends have also expressed interest in using the tracks as a site for events, such as concerts and festivals.

The Friends have been working with the state and the city to finalize the purchase of the tracks. The state has been willing to sell the tracks, but negotiations have been ongoing. The Friends are hoping to finalize the purchase and develop a plan for the use of the tracks in the near future.

The Friends have also been working with the city of Cape May to develop a plan for the use of the tracks. The city has expressed interest in using the tracks as a site for events, such as concerts and festivals. The city has also expressed interest in using the tracks as a site for a bike path, a walking path, and as a trail for hikers.

The Friends are hopeful that they will be able to finalize the purchase of the tracks and develop a plan for the use of the tracks in the near future. They are working with the state and the city to finalize the purchase and to develop a plan for the use of the tracks.