Rate of COVID-19 increase higher in south Jersey
Sheer number lower here; 3 new deaths, 25 cases in Cape May County

BROOKE HANNAH Cape May Star-Press

While Atlantic County was seeing a worrisome doubling rate of COVID-19 in recent weeks—if not in days—it improved slightly in the amount of new cases reporting, dropping from a doubling rate of 14.5, just about the same as Cumberland County, with cases doubling in 1.2 days. Cape May County, by contrast, which was at 33 days at the end of last week, was at 11.8 days today, but the two are in south Jersey. As Gov. Phil Murphy announced.

Cape May County From Saturday through Monday, May 6-8, Cape May County Department of Health reported seven new COVID-19 deaths, bringing the countywide total to 21, plus 25 new positive tests for COVID-19, the coronavirus. For the current week, through May 8, at least three days.

On Monday, May 4, 105-year-old Rhoda Marie Quinlan from Lower Township and 76-year-old man from Middle Township died of COVID-19. Lower Township has 31 COVID-19 cases, with 15 recoveries reported 234 of the residents affected are now off quarantine.

Cape May County Health officials reported 241 cases as of noon on May 8, 2020, including 63 deaths in this county.

According to the New Jersey Department of Health, there are 35,059 positive tests and 7,910 deaths in Atlantic County, with the last second forecast among the South Jersey counties. Middle Township has 28 cases and 14 deaths.

Lower Township on Monday, May 4, 78-year-old and 69-year-old man from Middle Township died of COVID-19. Lower Township, which has 125 cases, as of Monday, also has 26 cases in long-term care facilities. Of the 25 reported deaths from Cape May County, 17 have been in long-term care. Of the 71 cases, 36 are women and 35 men.

Cancer patients: Frugality isn't your strong suit this week. You will have to pay attention to what you spend. The shop is open for business— but your finances are likely to be tight. Focus on what you need and what you can afford.

Lower Township is home of the Atlantic County. This week, you will be asked to cut back on your spending. You will have to be careful with your money and avoid unnecessary expenses. Be mindful of your finances and try to save money wherever possible.

Maplewood has four, West Wildwood has two and three cases, respectively, and Wildwood has two other cases. There are no active cases as of Monday in Cape May City, and the county as a whole has 151 cases.

Coralville has four, West Cape May has three, and Stone Harbor has two. The rest, including 15 in Lower Township food banks are in effect, the Division of Local Government Services has issued a statement that no one may currently have a 200 percent increase in the number of people and dogs inquiring. It is anticipated that this number will go up as more people get tested and recover.

VILLAS—At its next meeting, Lower Township Council is expected to approve the Lower Township Food Bank Plan, which will provide food and supplies to individuals and families in need. The plan includes weekly food and supply distributions, as well as the provision of emergency food boxes. Lower Township, which is home to more than 10,000 residents, is one of the areas with the highest rates of food insecurity in the county.

With the increasing number of COVID-19 cases and deaths, the Lower Township Food Bank has been working to provide essential food and resources to those in need. The plan includes weekly food and supply distributions, as well as the provision of emergency food boxes. Lower Township, which is home to more than 10,000 residents, is one of the areas with the highest rates of food insecurity in the county.

VILLAS—All five members of Lower Township Council have committed to donate a portion of their township and home on the board of education to help improve the food and supply for the coronavirus public health emergency. This initiative was first raised by Mayor Connie Sippel, Perry, and fully supported by Mayor Pete Sippel, Councilman John Sippel, and Councilwoman Renel Howard, according to a release from Friends of Sippel, Perry, and Coombs.

The initiative aims to assist residents with their food needs and provide more resources for Lower Township food banks through the donation of food and supplies. The plan includes weekly food and supply distributions, as well as the provision of emergency food boxes. Lower Township, which is home to more than 10,000 residents, is one of the areas with the highest rates of food insecurity in the county.

VILLAS—The initiative will provide food and supplies to individuals and families in need. The plan includes weekly food and supply distributions, as well as the provision of emergency food boxes. Lower Township, which is home to more than 10,000 residents, is one of the areas with the highest rates of food insecurity in the county.

The initiative, which is being led by Mayor Sippel, will also provide resources for residents to help improve the food and supply for the coronavirus public health emergency. This initiative was first raised by Mayor Connie Sippel, Perry, and fully supported by Mayor Pete Sippel, Councilman John Sippel, and Councilwoman Renel Howard, according to a release from Friends of Sippel, Perry, and Coombs.

The initiative aims to assist residents with their food needs and provide more resources for Lower Township food banks through the donation of food and supplies. The plan includes weekly food and supply distributions, as well as the provision of emergency food boxes. Lower Township, which is home to more than 10,000 residents, is one of the areas with the highest rates of food insecurity in the county.

VILLAS—The initiative will provide food and supplies to individuals and families in need. The plan includes weekly food and supply distributions, as well as the provision of emergency food boxes. Lower Township, which is home to more than 10,000 residents, is one of the areas with the highest rates of food insecurity in the county.

The initiative, which is being led by Mayor Sippel, will also provide resources for residents to help improve the food and supply for the coronavirus public health emergency. This initiative was first raised by Mayor Connie Sippel, Perry, and fully supported by Mayor Pete Sippel, Councilman John Sippel, and Councilwoman Renel Howard, according to a release from Friends of Sippel, Perry, and Coombs.